

America's ability to project strength around the world begins with a strong foundation at home. That means focusing on job creation and economic policies that preserve and expand the middle class; protecting our environment and our coastline; ensuring that all children have access to first-rate public schools; enacting common sense gun safety measures that protect our families; and guaranteeing that all people have quality, affordable healthcare. The issues affecting the people of Palm Beach County and the Treasure Coast could not be more important, and they deserve a representative in Congress who will work across the aisle to make government work for them.

As the mother of an infant, and the daughter of parents in their sixties, I am committed to creating a bright future for all of our children, making government work for working families, and protecting our seniors.
